"The ~~Black Domino~~"

A cabaret dancer, who has a secret husband, a doctor, who is first and foremost a blackmailer. The son of a wealthy man falls in love with her, and seeing a chance to 'hold up' the wealthy judge, the husband encourages the romance, and forces his wife to present herself to the boy's family, knowing full well that the judge will pay a goodly sum to prevent his son from marrying a cabaret dancer.

The offer is made but the doctor refuses, hoping for more. He does not know that the "nurse" in his office is a detective and that he has been under suspicion for some time.

The boy's mother plans a masked ball. The doctor orders his wife to attend, and he himself, having discovered the costume that the young man will wear, finds a similar one for himself. It proves useful indeed, for the doctor sees an opportunity to rifle the safe. In the midst of his burglary, the judge enters, and in the scuffle that follows the older man is fatally stabbed. It is at this moment that the murdered man's wife enters. She sees the dead body and the figure of a man robed as her son had been robed, standing near with a bloody dagger in his hand. Thinking only that it was her son, suddenly maddened, who committed the crime, she takes the weapon and send the disguised figure away. Naturally the doctor need no urging and when the crowds arrived, the mother is held on the charge of murder.

The coroner's inquest sends her to jail. She puzzles hopelessly over the horrible deed which she believes her son committed. And the son in turn, wonders what caused his mother to murder the man she had always loved. But his suspicions are aroused when the Cumstances are explained to him, and he hurries to the girl-detective. Together they work on the case and sufficient evidence against the doctor is unearthed.

But the doctor has suspected that he is being trailed and makes one desperate effort to kill the young man. This fails and the guilty man and his wife are both lead off to jail, while the nurse and the young man, who has learned to love her, look forward to a happy future together.
